CLAYPOOL URGES MEASURE TO AID STATE'S MINERS

Ross-Co Democrat Opens Campaign for Congress After Guffey Ruling

MOONEY "EX-DIGGER"

Would Favor Law Similar, But Constitutional, Nominee Declares

CHILLICOTHE, May 19—Harold K. Claypool, Democratic nominee for Congress from the 11th Ohio district, launched his campaign Tuesday in a plea for the next congress to enact a constitutional measure to embody the stabilization features of the Guffey Coal Act, outlawed by the United States Supreme court.

Claypool declared that conditions in the Hocking valley fields demanded that regulatory measures be put in effect if both miners and operators were to prosper.

"If elected to congress this fall," Claypool said, "I will favor a bill which will embody the regulatory measures of the Guffey act. I have no doubt that the same intent of the act ca[illegible] ried out in a constitu[illegible] ner."

Claypool's opponent, L. P. Mooney nominated by the Republicans of the district, is a former coal miner and a former state representative from Hocking-co.

PICKAWAY-CO G.O.P. LEADERS TO ELECT

Meeting Called for Friday Evening in Office of Tom Renick; Walters Expected to Be Elected Again; Democrats to Organize Sometime in June

The new Pickaway-co Republican Central committee will meet Friday at 8 p. m. in the office of Tom A. Renick, Executive committee chairman, to organize.

Several changes in the central committee roster were voted in the election last Tuesday.

John E. Walters, Circleville-twp, the party's nominee for representative, is chairman of the central committee and will preside Friday evening. G. O. P. leaders believe Walters will be re-elected chairman without any opposition.

It is probable the central committee will extend its organization meeting by choosing the executive committee.

No date has been set for the organization meeting of the Democratic central committee, although it is expected to take place about June 1.

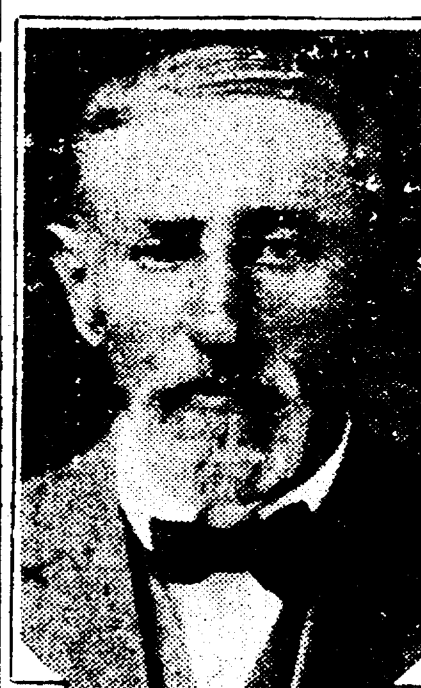

Cecil Briggs of New Holland, recently appointed postmaster, is chairman of the central committee, while George G. Adkins, W. Union-st, is chairman of the Executive group.

COLUMBUS, May 19—(UP)—The two major political parties prepared to hold statuatory organization meetings here this week, and it was expected that present party leaders in both camps would be re-elected without opposition.

The Republican State Central Committee met today to re-elect Ed D. Schorr, Cincinnati, as chairman. Schorr also will be reappointed chairman of the Republican Executive committee, it was understood.

In their meeting today, the Republicans also will name a campaign committee, with its chairman to be selected by Attorney General John W. Bricker, Republican nominee for governor. It was understood that Bricker would name Dale Dunifon, Van Wert, first assistant attorney general.

Several Changes Made in Village and Rural Staffs for 1936 and 1937

CITY MEETS TONIGHT

Principal Martin and Coach Kauber Re-Elected By Ashville Educators

Five Pickaway-co boards of education elected teachers for the 1936-1937 terms Monday evening. Several more boards are yet to choose their administrators and teachers, Pickaway and Washington-twp schools being without superintendents as a result of the retirement of M. C. Warren and election of Carl D. Bennett to the Walnut-twp position.

The Circleville board of education meets this evening at which time an effort will be made to fill all positions for the next year.

Members of the Ashville-Harrison-twp joint board renamed all high school teachers except two. The teaching staff follows: E. F. Martin, principal, science and manual training; Nolan Murphy, commercial; A. J. Kauber, athletic coach and mathematics; Fred Brobst, instrumental music instructor, and Mrs. Shirley Cooper, Latin. No domestic science or girls' physical education teachers have been named. Jessie Walden was domestic science teacher the last term and Virginia Casteel, physical education instructor.

Unless a special meeting of the board is called the next regular meeting will not be held for another month.

Amendment to Regulate Nation Industry Hinted

Guffey Coal Decision Reverberations Heard in Capital; Hoover, Landon, Farley in Action

BY UNITED PRESS

Political implications of the Supreme Court's Guffey case decision today were studied in the national capital for expected reverberations in the 1936 presidential campaign.

Chief interest was in the possibility that the issue of a Constitutional amendment giving the federal government clear power to regulate industry and labor on a national basis might be injected into the campaign.

Definite developments, however, appeared to wait on more detailed study of the court's decision outlawing the coal control act.

Meantime, action was reported all along the political front.

Developments:

Former President Herbert Hoover reiterated at Chicago that he was not a candidate for the Republican presidential or any other nomination.

New Jersey voters went to the polls for a test of sentiment between Gov. Alf Landon of Kansas and Sen. William E. Borah. Also at issue was Gov. Harold G. Hoffman whose candidacy as a Republican convention delegate at large was expected to show reaction to his intervention in the Lindbergh kidnap case. Col. Henry Breckinridge was entered alone in the Democratic presidential preference poll but President Roosevelt was assured of the Democratic delegate slate.

Governor Landon made a nationally broadcast address in which he characterized the youth movement in politics as bringing "a breath of fresh air into a stuffy, smelly room."

Chairman Henry P. Fletcher of the Republican national committee attacked the New Deal Home Owners Loan Corporation for "putting the United States into the mortgage business on a scale that staggers the imagination."

Democratic National Chairman James A. Farley went to Providence, R. I., for an address to the Rhode Island state Democratic convention later today.

WASHINGTON, May 19—(UP)—Supreme Court invalidation of the Guffey coal control act challenged President Roosevelt today to carry the issue of constitutional amendment to the people in the presidential campaign. The decision pointed toward political and economic consequences.

Mr. Roosevelt may reveal New Deal strategy at his regular press conference at 4 p. m. EST.

Labor leaders already were planning pressure for a campaign year showdown on constitutional limitations defined by the courts prescribing federal regulation of hours, wages, and industrial competitive conditions generally.

May Be Voluntary

There was talk in the capital today of possible trouble in the mine fields. Congressional leaders doubted time would permit patching the Guffey bill at this session. Lawyers believed the court blasted beyond repair the "little NRA" theory of federal individual-industry control. There were expressions of hope, also, that coal control can be achieved voluntarily.

Scrapping of the Wagner Labor Relations act on the Guffey precedent was judged to be only a

Coleman was arrested by police Saturday night in the garage of Troy White on the northeast corner of Everett and First-aves. Police said he had obtained five gallons of gasoline from a Sinclair tank truck and said he was going to take the truck for a drive to Chillicothe.

C. & O. OPERATOR SAVES BIG TRAIN

Watchfulness of T. V. Akins, Chesapeake & Ohio operator at Scippo, saved his railroad thousands of dollars at 3:30 a. m. Tuesday.

Akins was on duty at the Scippo water stop when he noticed a hot journal on a car wheel as a westbound coal train sped past. He used a red lantern to flash a "hot box" sign, and the conductor riding the caboose saw it. The train was stopped opposite the Sturm-Dillard gravel washer.

Just as it came to a stop the wheel fell off. Had the train been in motion many coal cars would have been wrecked. A crew was called from Columbus and a new set of wheels put on the damaged car.

The train was 160 cars long, all loaded with coal.

"Both vessels suffered turbine derangements," the navy said. "They are proceeding back to San Pedro under escort of three fleet tugs."

The navy explained that the fact that the engine trouble developed almost simultaneously on both warships probably was responsible for the collision report.

Tall Tales

SINCE Russell Imler of the Southern Ohio Electric Co. joined the "Liar's Club" last week, Karl Herrmann of the C. F. Seitz store becomes a member this week.

Karl sold a Circleville housewife an electric refrigerator. She was assured that the expense of running it would be little.

The first month her bill was very high, and she called Karl for an explanation. He agreed that the amount was excessive. He had the apparatus examined by a mechanic, and promised a much lower bill the next month. When the bill arrived it was even larger than the first one.

The mechanic was sent to the home, and arrived unannounced. He asked to be shown the machine at once. When he and the housewife entered the kitchen, what was their surprise to find the door of the refrigerator wide open! And Amanda, the maid, was standing directly in front of it, ironing and singing happily!

When questioned, she replied: "Oh, yassur, ah always open the do' when ah irons. It give me such a nice breeze on mah back."

NEWSPAPER OPPOSES ZIONCHECK'S ACTIONS

ST. THOMAS, Virgin Islands, May 19.—(UP)—The St. Thomas Daily News today criticized Rep. Marion Zioncheck, D., Wash., for:

1. Biting Gov. Lawrence W. Cramer's chauffeur.
2. Lapping soup from a plate at a public dinner.
3. Taking a stranger's automobile which had been left parked in a public street.

Ten other acts of the congressman were noted by the newspaper. It said Zioncheck bit the governor's chauffeur in an effort to take control of the car the victim was driving.

"Zioncheck longed to be treated like a human being," the News said editorially. "He flew over here to escape the threats of blood-thirsty Puerto Ricans. He started an eventful and glamorous stay."

Zioncheck and his bride plan to sail for New York aboard the steamship Scanpenn on May 20, ending a honeymoon which took them from Washington to Miami and by air to Puerto Rico and the Virgin islands.

AUTHOR - KILLER GOES ON TRIAL; SANITY FOUGHT

John Fiorenza Charged With Murder of Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton

NEW YORK, May 19.—(UP)—The frayed string that curly-haired John Fiorenza dropped beneath the nude body of Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton brought him into court today, charged with strangling the short story writer in her Beekman place apartment on Good Friday.

The 13-inch length of cord was used to tie the wrists of the wife of Lewis H. Titterton, National Broadcasting Company executive, when the 24-year-old ex-convict, inflamed by her quiet beauty, forced his way into her home and then left her to die in the half-filled bathtub of the apartment.

Fiorenza, tracked down and forced to confess by a combination of ultra-modern criminology and old-fashioned detective work, is expected to plead insanity and his attorney has indicated that this will figure in his questioning of talesmen when selection of the jury begins in general sessions court today.

May Last 10 Days

The prosecution, conducted personally by District Attorney William C. Dodge, will center on the confession made by Fiorenza, after his arrest. About 20 witnesses will be summoned to testify that the statement was obtained without duress. Dodge expects the trial to last 10 days.

Fiorenza was not arrested until 11 days after the slaying although he was under suspicion from the first. A few hours after the assault he returned to the apartment with his employer, an upholsterer, to deliver a repaired lounge and pretended to be horrified at the discovery of her body. He summoned the police.

He had reported three hours late for work that day, however, and his explanation that he had gone to the probation bureau was found to be false. Detectives kept him under surveillance by pretending to ask his advice until scientific tests established the type of cord found in the bathtub and painstaking inquiry determined the factory that made it.

The factory records disclosed that similar string had been shipped to the store in which Fiorenza was employed and confronted with this evidence he confessed.

SENIORS PRESENT "THE SWAN" TWO NIGHTS THIS WEEK

The final rehearsal before the performance was held this evening for "The Swan", the play being presented by the Senior class. Roy H. Bowen is the director.

The cast has spent the last four weeks in preparation. A full house should greet the members both nights the play is presented.

The story centers around a royal family who had lost its rights to the throne. The only possible way which they could regain this throne was to marry the princess, Alexandria to the Prince Albert who seems to have no interest in her. Professor Agi, her tutor, whom she has scarcely noticed before, falls in love with her and she finally learns to love him. But she wishes to become a queen. Many interesting and entangling circumstances follow to make the play one of the most interesting and novel, yet the most beautiful ever presented at Circleville high school.

You are no doubt wondering who Alexandria finally marries.

See "The Swan" to be presented tomorrow and Friday at 8:15 in the high school auditorium.

GOV. HOFFMAN HITS REPORTER ON VOTING EVE

Defeat for Idaho Man May Result in Split; Roosevelt, Breckinridge Tangle

TRENTON, N. J., May 19.— Gov. Alf M. Landon and Sen. William E. Borah met head-on in the New Jersey Republican primaries today in what, many observers said, was the crucial test of Borah's candidacy for his party's presidential nomination.

It was a test of Republican sentiment in the industrial east on which the eyes of politicians, far and wide, were centered. At the same time, Democratic voters participated in their party's primaries, wherein President Roosevelt was opposed indirectly by Col. Henry Breckinridge, an anti-New Deal man.

In reality, there were four contests, two Republican and two Democratic. Each party held a presidential preference primary and each held a primary to elect delegates to its national convention. The results of the first will be purely advisory and not binding on the winners of the second.

Pledged to Roosevelt

All Democratic delegate-candidates were pledged to President Roosevelt, but the president was not entered in the preference primary, where Breckinridge was the only candidate.

In the Republican preference primary, both Landon and Borah were entered—providing the only direct test. Landon backers had a complete slate of pledged delegate-candidates running, Borah backers, only a partial slate.

Many observers believed that Borah would make a comparatively poor showing that might precipitate him into making an open break with his party—the break at which he hinted following his defeat in the Ohio primaries. His candidacy was somewhat obscured during the campaign by the spectacular battle of two Landon pledged candidates — Gov. Harold G. Hoffman and former Congressman Franklin W. Fort over the propriety of Hoffman's activities in the Hauptmann case.

Reporter Slugged

Hoffman climaxed his campaign last night by knocking down Lou Wedemar, reporter for Universal Service, in a corridor outside the exclusive night club. The Rainbow Room, on the 65th floor of the RCA building in New York City. It was a one punch fight. Hoffman hit Wedemar and Wedemar hit the floor. They had been known as at least nominal friends, and the motivation of Hoffman's punch was not known.

Hoffman was a candidate for delegate at large, linked with three other candidates as the G.O.P. State committee's slate. Fort campaigned exclusively on the ground that Hoffman's conduct of the Hauptmann case had "disgraced" New Jersey, the four candidates with the highest number of votes will be elected, but Hoffman and Fort made the fight personal by asking voters to elect the other three "regular" candidates.

The preference primary with only Borah and Landon on the ballot gave Republican voters a chance to choose with no extraneous issue injected. Although the Idahoan spoke in Newark last Thursday and Landon has not been in the state, Borah had little organization support and was conceded a chance to win no more than three or four delegates.

Breckinridge criticized President Roosevelt caustically for refusing to enter a direct contest. Breckinridge made a 1-5 showing against the president in Maryland, the last of four states in whose primaries he already had run.

Shapes Farm Policy

WOMAN, 20, TO RETURN AS DILL CASE WITNESS

MT. VERNON, May 19—(UP) —Margie Heaton Dill, 20, Mt. Vernon stenographer, was to be called to the witness stand again today to testify in her $25,000 suit against Former U. S. Senator Clarence C. Dill, her husband's uncle, and Mrs. Grace Dill, her mother-in-law.

The young Mrs. Dill already has testified concerning an illegal operation which she alleged was performed upon her to destroy any family ties between her and her husband, Wendell C. Dill, to whom she was married on May 29, 1934, the day after both were graduated from Fredericktown, Ohio, high school.

She testified that former Senator Dill had furnished a list of names from which Mrs. Grace Dill selected a person in Washington, D. C., to perform the illegal operation.

BRUCE BARTON ASSISTS STRICKEN YOUNG STAR

HOLLYWOOD, May 19—(UP) —A gift of $2,500 from Bruce Barton, famous author and advertising man, today went to finance the hospitalization of Mary Blackford, 20-year-old actress who has been paralyzed for nearly two years.

Barton donated the sum to a clinic where his own daughter, Betsy, 18, regained her ability to walk following an attack of paralysis. The author specified that Milton H. Berry, who operates the institution, use the money to aid the most deserving case he could find.

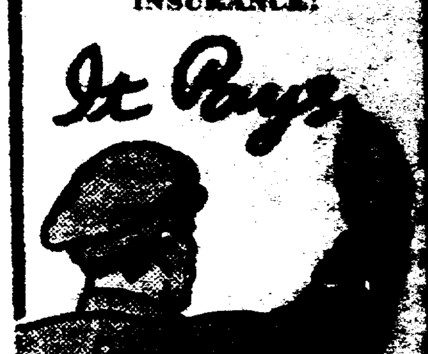

Berry decided Miss Blackford needed the treatments badly and named her as beneficiary of the gift.

The blonde actress became paralyzed following an automobile accident in which she suffered spinal injuries. The late Will Rogers, with whom she played juvenile leads, helped pay for part of her treatment and other film colony friends staged a benefit dance to raise money.

THE RESETTLEMENT PROJECT

LAND, totalling more than 1,000 acres, has been optioned by Pickaway, Ross and Fayette-co farmers to the Federal Resettlement administration to provide homes for families forced to move from their hill properties because of the government's reforestation program. Actual purchase of the land will be announced in a short time.

It behooves Resettlement officials to exercise much care in selecting families to occupy farms in these counties. Most of Pickaway-co's tillers of the soil are well-trained, and are backed by many years of actual farming experience. They would have to be to maintain the high reputation Pickaway-co possesses in the state and national agricultural picture. Resettlement officials are well-enough acquainted with their work to know that a person who has never actually farmed cannot hope to make a success of the property the government turns over to him. It will be their duty to choose and to help train men and women for their work. Care should be taken to select the proper type of individual for Pickaway-co's farms.

Much good land, it is reported, has been leased in southwestern Pickaway-co. It will be a shame if it is not placed in the hands of persons who will try to be successful in the great field of agriculture, and, at the same time, become worthy citizens, adding to Pickaway-co's splendid community character.

LAST OF THE CRUSADERS

IN MANY respects, Lord Allenby, conqueror of Palestine, who died suddenly in London at the age of seventy-five, was Britain's most perfect soldier. His record, regardless of whether he served on the Western Front, where the grim warfare of attrition was carried on throughout the long years, or in the East, which called for far different military knowledge and qualities of leadership, was unmarred by failure.

There has never been any disposition among informed military authorities to minimize the fighting qualities of the Turks. In fact, John Masefield, in his memorable history of the Dardanelles campaign, refers to them as among the bravest and most gallant of foes. The decisive defeat of the British forces at Gallipoli stands as irrefutable evidence of the courage and skill of the Turks.

Yet Allenby, in his twentieth century crusade, followed in the path of Peter the Hermit, of Godfrey and Raymond of Toulouse, Tancred and Bohemund and Richard the Lion-Hearted, capturing Gaza, then Bethlehem and finally Jerusalem, afterward crushing the Turkish stronghold at Aleppo.

These triumphs constitute, of course, a tribute to the military genius of Lord Allenby. It is doubtful, however, if they reflect the most glorious side of his character. He gained in statute because he was a great soldier who saw war in its true light, as a blight upon civilization, the supreme expression of human folly and futility, something to be banished from the face of the earth.

Measured by any standard, Lord Allenby was a great and a gallant Englishman, one who served his country well.

JOB ON BRAIN TRUST BEGGING

WASHINGTON—Professor O. G. Saxon, head of the Republican brain trust, is in the market for a distinguished authority on foreign affairs.

He has plenty of economists and financial experts on his staff, but in the realm of the international there is a complete void and he wants to fill it.

So far Saxon has encountered some difficulty in this.

It was suggested to him by a well-meaning friend that Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of State in the Hoover cabinet, would make an excellent foreign affairs adviser. National Committee moguls, however, vetoed the idea on the spot.

Stimson has indicated approval of the Roosevelt-Hull reciprocal trade policy—which runs directly counter to the high-tariff theories of Republican big-wigs.

Saxon then offered the job to a faculty colleague, Professor Edwin M. Borchard of the Yale Law School.

Borchard is an ardent isolationist, believes in the "freedom of the seas" and the old-fashioned maintenance of "neutral rights" in the event of a foreign war. In pacifist circles Professor Borchard is regarded disapprovingly as a "jingo".

The Yale academician, however, turned down Saxon's offer. He was willing to work on a part-time basis, but Saxon said he wanted an expert who could devote full time from July 1 to about September 15.

BRITISH-ITALIAN WAR

This will probably be denied, but Sir Ronald Lindsay, British Ambassador, in recent talks with the State Department, has indicated as strongly as diplomatic language permits that war between Great Britain and Italy is inescapable.

It may be postponed several months or for a year or two, but the British appear to believe it only a matter of time.

CHAPTER 50

"I GOT IN from—Ossining—Monday evening," Ward Van Every told me. "The first man I met on the street was Roy Barrimore. Old friend of mine. I knew him long ago. Surprised to see me. I told him, of course, about the prison, and he sympathized. Asked me if he could do anything, and we went up to his place. I told him he could call my brother for me. I had money in a safety deposit box, but Dow had the key. Has had it for years. Keeping it for me. Barrimore called—I'm telling you everything—and was told Dow would not be in until midnight.

"You'll wonder why I didn't call myself. I hadn't used a telephone for years. Never had used one with the dial system. I was nervous, and Barrimore was only too glad to do it for me.

"I left his place after that, although he urged me to stay. But I was nervous. My appearance bothered me. The short hair. Everything. I imagined I screamed prison to everyone. Supersensitive. I am yet. I can hardly bear to see anyone on the streets. I looked up Dow's address, and determined to go there at midnight myself. Joyce—you don't know that, so I won't tell you——"

"I do. Van Every had to tell us finally."

"I'm sorry!" His concern was terrible. "She doesn't know?"

"No, and never will if you wish it that way."

"Good! I knew Dow would always keep my trust. I didn't want to run into her. Dow said she had a picture of me. I was afraid she might recognize me. I walked over to the house, and got there a little early. Eleven-thirty it was. I didn't know whether Dow was home or not. And I couldn't be sure that Joyce wouldn't open the door herself. I knew I would show somehow my love for her if I saw her. Well, I decided to wait a while, so I slouched behind the iron grill, under the steps. You know where?"

I nodded. So Ward Van Every was there Monday night!

"I waited a long time. Finally Dow came, you with him, and also this actress. I remember wondering how long they would stay, and whether I should come back the next day. I decided to wait, because I didn't want to come in the daylight. Dow might be embarrassed at his visitor. Sensitive again. I wish I had gone. Then I wouldn't have all this on my conscience.

"I finally sat down on the paving stone. I planned as soon as Dow's guests were gone to go up and ring the doorbell. I noticed a taxi come up and draw up to the next house. I paid little attention to it, except to creep farther back in the little court. A woman got out of it. I shrank farther back, for I imagined it might be Joyce. And she might see me. I began to feel more like a robber than ever. The woman, I saw right after my first scare, could not be Joyce. A mature woman. She was dressed in a fur wrap. As she went up the stairs she glanced at the court. I thought I was lost, but she couldn't have seen me because she went on. I knew that her errand must be some secret one because she tiptoed. With hardly a sound she put a key in the door. I did not hear the door open, but I heard it close, a loud click. When I looked again, the woman was gone—in the house.

"I wondered how long my brother's little midnight affair would last. I had no doubt that this woman in the fur wrap was a guest. That is at first—until I read the papers later.

"Some time later—I can't be exact, because I couldn't see my watch it was so dark, and I didn't want to make any noise, I felt bad enough as it was—two other people came, a young man and a girl. They tripped up the steps and whispered a few seconds at the door. The girl seemed to be urging the man to do something he didn't want to do. I couldn't hear their conversation. The girl wore no hat, and her hair shone in the dark. Gold. I knew it must be Joyce. Finally the girl unlocked the door and they went in, but I did not hear the door close. Nor did the lights on the first floor, the parlor floor it was, go on. Even when the woman in the fur coat went in, these lights were not turned on. They would have flooded the little court, so you see I would have had to go. That's why I stayed, principally because of the darkness.

"I looked up at the door. I thought it was partly open. While I was debating whether or not I should go in—conceal myself of course until Dow was free—the woman in the fur coat slipped out, and down the stairs. She must have heard a noise, because before I knew it she was near me in the court, crouched down beside the grill. I dare not breathe. I sat motionless. She did not look around, only leaned back against the grill, and turned the collar of her coat against her face. I could not see her, but I could hear her breathing. She seemed to be excited. Once she put her hand near mine on the grill door, to steady herself. It was shaking.

"I knew now she was no guest of Dow's. Else she would not have hidden with me there by the grill.

"I saw presently, rather heard, why she had hidden with me. The front door closed, softly, but loud enough for me to hear it, and footsteps came down the stairs. A man passed before us. Evidently he noticed the woman's taxi which was still waiting. I heard him ask the driver if he had a fare, heard the driver say yes. Then the man walked on rather fast down the street. As soon as he was out of sight, the women flew to the taxi and it took her away. I'm sure she did not see me, did not know I was there." Ward Van Every stopped for breath. He was panting, and the hand that clutched the arm of his easy-chair was quivering.

Edith Bryce. The woman in the fur coat. It could be no one else. Keyes' case was complete. All this time Ward had possessed the key to the crime. . . .

"It was all very queer standing there, not knowing what to do. The man I decided was the same one who had come with Joyce—if the girl was Joyce. I was sure it was. So sure that I had a hard time, while the woman in the fur coat was beside me, to keep from trembling. I recognized the man by his overcoat as he talked to the taxi driver.

"I was tempted to go then. Dow's party was getting too mysterious for me. I didn't know whether to go in, and warn him about the woman—she might be a robber or something. However, she had entered by a key that fitted the door.

"I stayed—what seemed to me to be hours went by. In reality it was only minutes—long ones at that. Presently a dim light flashed on right beside me. Behind the grill. With that I scurried away, across the street and sauntered along there for a while. Then a man carrying a bag went up the steps to Dow's house. There was a light in the hall now, and I saw the door open for the man. A Chinaman let him in. Then the door closed. More time passed, still I stayed, across the street, but when a car with a siren dashed up to the house and stopped, and men began getting out and running up the steps I went away. The police.

"I was sure the woman in the fur coat had robbed the house. Yet why should a man, obviously a doctor, go into the house? That he was a doctor seemed reasonable to me. He was carrying a bag, hurrying. A servant had met him at the front door.

"I thought of Joyce. Worried that something had happened to her. I was crazy for hours. Walked the streets. Didn't know where I was. Finally I killed time in a coffee house. It was dawn when I came out. I walked some more. Already people were hurrying to work. I looked at the news stands, bought a paper. The story I read, you know. I was sick with nervousness by this time. Should I go to the police, tell them what I knew? Or should I trust that they would find out? An actress killed in Dow's house. I, also, a murderer outside when it happened. My agony was terrible. I thought of Dow. His anxiety if he knew I was near—he hadn't even known I was out of prison. I didn't want him to know until I saw him, Joyce. It would all come out, if I went to the police. Who I am. Who Joyce is. I, her father, a murderer. I know how the police go about asking questions. I know only too well. Terrible.

"Finally I reached a decision. I would go back to my hotel—a small one on Seventh avenue, get my bags and go away. I did, packed them in a hurry, and took a taxi to Brooklyn, registering there under another false name. The first I had given at the Seventh avenue hotel was a false one, too. The hotel I chose in Brooklyn was a small one, a cheap one. I felt safe there. For days I stayed in my room, only coming out at night for meals, and the newspapers. I was anxious about Joyce. I was sure the woman in the fur coat was the—murderer. Why had she been so quiet entering the house? Why so secret coming out? She must have heard a noise coming out of the door, and hidden then with me near the grill. I was tortured by the thought of what I knew, yet I dared not tell.

"The other murder—not in the house, but on Fifth avenue. I read it, and fought with myself again. If I did not tell there would be more deaths. Perhaps Joyce. I must tell.

"Barrimore was the only touch I had with the world, but he was dead. There was no one else I could trust. I thought of Warden Lawn, but if I telephoned him, communicated with him, my call might be traced, and I had no one to send for him.

"Dow's house full of detectives, so the papers said. You were a friend of his, you had been present at the—murder. A friend of Miss Younger, too.

"Tonight I took the subway in, frightened to death. I knew your hotel from the papers. I came upstairs as if I lived here. You were a long time coming. First I hid near the fire escape, watching your room every minute—that's all——"

CONTRACT BRIDGE

A GOOD GUESS INSURED GAME

SOMETIMES a knowledge of what an opponent may be expected to do coupled with a good guess, insures fulfillment of contract, as was the case with the following hand, played at 4-Hearts by South, and doubled by East as a sort of smoke screen for his partner.

	♠ J 9 ♥ K 7 ♣ 9 7 2
♠ 10 6 4 ♥ 2 ♣ A 10 5	N. W. E. S.	♥ J 8 4 3 ♦ Q ♣ Q J
	♥ A Q 10 9 6 ♦ 9 8

	♠ Q J 9 3 ♥ K 7 5 ♦ 10 2 ♣ K 9 7 2
♠ A K 10 6 4 2 ♥ 2 ♦ 6 5 ♣ A 10 5 3	N. W. E. S.	♠ 7 5 ♥ J 8 4 3 ♦ Q J 7 3 ♣ Q J 6
	♠ 8 ♥ A Q 10 9 6 ♦ A K 9 8 4 ♣ 8 4

Bidding went: South, 1-Heart; West, 2-Spades; North, 2-No Trumps; South, 3-Diamonds; North, 3-Hearts; South, 4-Hearts; East, doubled. Neither side was vulnerable.

The opening lead was the K of spades, followed by a low club. South made a good guess and won with dummy's K. Two diamond tricks were next taken with the A-K. Dummy ruffed a third round of diamonds. The Q of spades was led. On it declarer discarded his last club, giving defenders 2 tricks, while declarer took 4 tricks. At the end of the sixth trick the holdings about the table were as shown below.

West must be careful not to lead a spade, as that should give declarer a trick over his contract. Unless East ruffs declarer will let go a diamond. If the first spade is not ruffed dummy will lead his second good spade. If that is not ruffed declarer will let go his last diamond. The K of hearts then will be led, followed by dummy's lowest heart. Declarer then must pick up East's last 3 hearts, no matter how East plays them. If East ruffs either spade led from dummy, declarer will overruff. Dummy will ruff a return lead of diamonds, then the K of hearts will be led, leaving only J and another trump in East's hand, to be picked up with declarer's A-Q, after South has ruffed himself in by leading a club from dummy. Of course East may discard his diamond on the lead of a spade. In that case both diamonds become good in declarer's hand, one diamond will be discarded on the spade. The K of hearts then will be led from dummy, followed by a low heart, enabling declarer to pick up all of East's trumps, for 5-odd.

After West has taken his spade trick and given dummy the next trick, by his lead of a low club, only imperfect play by declarer can prevent 5-odd from being made, no matter what West leads after taking his second defensive trick, but a heart lead may puzzle declarer most.

Skin Condition Caused by Arsenic Poisoning

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

AN ASTONISHING and unsuspected condition of affairs has been revealed by some clever research in a large New York skin clinic. The physician in charge realized that he was seeing a number of skin conditions which he had not been able to assign a cause. There were pigmentations of the skin, peculiar eruptions, and falling of the hair. He began to wonder whether these could be symptoms of arsenical poisoning, and testing the blood of a number of these patients he was startled to find that over a hundred of them had large amounts of arsenic in the system.

Dr. Clendening

The puzzling thing was where the arsenic came from in such a miscellaneous group. Arsenic poisoning, of course, is encountered in certain occupations, but these people belonged to no definite industrial group. Some of them had taken tonics or drops over a long time, usually on their own responsibility and without a doctor's orders. One patient was a cosmetic manufacturer; one was a candy maker and encountered arsenic as an impurity of commercial glucose; others came into contact with furs, wallpaper, paints and household insecticides.

In Contact With Fruit

Most interesting to me was the fact that some of these patients were in contact with fruit—a grocer, a fruit peddler and a fruit grower.

For many years the U. S. Department of Agriculture has been trying to enforce legislation to make fruit growers wash the arsenic that is used to spray fruit off the surface before it is marketed. Legislation to enforce this has frequently been blocked by congressmen on the grounds that the small amount of arsenic on the surface of fruit of this character does no harm. Here is something for those congressmen to ponder.

The most curious case of this kind which has come to my attention is that of a man who had diabetes and was told that a pancreatin pill containing gold and arsenic was a cure for it. He took this for a year until he had all the symptoms of arsenic poisoning, not only skin eruption but the nerve paralysis, and only then did he reconsult his physician.

QUESTIONS FROM READERS

A. O.: "I at one time doctored and dieted for about a year for ulcerated stomach. I was more or less supposed to be cured; however, am still somewhat cautious about my diet. Now what I would like to know is (1) whether it is safe to eat such vegetables as radishes, cucumbers, onions, tomatoes, cabbage, etc.; also relishes such as olives, ketchup, etc. (2) I am also taking yeast mixed with hot water and sugar to clear up my complexion. Is this harmful to ulcers?"

Answer: (1) Ulcers tend to recur and it is not wise to eat the rough vegetables you mention until you have been symptom-free for at least five years. (2) Yeast does no harm to peptic ulcer.

Poems That Live

THE VINE

The wine of Love is music,
And the feast of Love is song:
And when Love sits down to the banquet,
Love sits long:

Sits long and arises drunken,
But not with the feast and the wine;
He reeleth with his own heart,
That great, rich Vine,
—James Thomson

DAYBREAK

A wind came up out of the sea,
And said, "O mists, make room for me!"

It hailed the ships, and cried, "Sail on,
Ye mariners, the night is gone!"

And hurried landward far away,
Crying, "Awake! it is the day!"

It said unto the forest, "Shout!
Hang all your leafy banners out!"

It touched the wood-bird's folded wing,
And said, "O bird, awake and sing!"

And o'er the farms, "O chanticleer,
Your clarion blow, the day is near!"

It whispered to the fields of corn,
"Bow down, and hail the coming morn!"

It shouted through the belfry-tower,
"Awake, O bell! proclaim the hour."

It crossed the churchyard with a sigh,
And said, "Not yet! in quiet lie."
—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

World At A Glance

—By—
Charles P. Stewart

If congressmen read the country's wishes aright, a large majority of the American people have had all the currency inflation they want.

To be sure, it was not expected that the inflationary Frazier-Lemke bill would become law at this session of the national legislature.

However, even its foes thought that it might get through the house of representatives. Many representatives have a habit of voting for measures that personally they don't like, depending on the senate to beat them. All hands were confident that the senate would turn thumbs down on that bill. But if, by any chance, the senate did pass it, it was well known that it would be vetoed by President Roosevelt, and no inflationist was so optimistic as to predict that his veto, on that subject, could be overridden.

SNOWED UNDER

Anyway, inflationists felt sure, and anti-inflationists admitted, that the Frazier-Lemke plan would be defeated in the lower house, if at all, by a very narrow margin.

Instead of which it was snowed under, 259 to 142.

The leaders' idea of a campaign against the bill was so many of them next November that the formers' pet scheme will be adopted by the Seventy-fifth congress.

But if the 235 correctly assessed sentiment in their respective bailiwicks (and politicians are pretty accurate folk at this sort of calculations) maybe they can't be beaten. Contrariwise, maybe they will make inroads against the 142, and the Seventy-fifth congress will be more anti-inflationary than this one.

CONSIDERABLE INFLATION

For the information of folk who perhaps never studied it, the Frazier-Lemke program was framed with a view to enable farmers to pay off their mortgages on an easy, long-term basis. That part of it was all right with the "antis."

Their objection was that the payments were to be made in printing press money — three million dollars' worth of it.

And numerous anti-inflationists were growing fearful of inflation.

Devaluation of the dollar was inflationary. Much relief legislation has been inflationary. The soldiers' bonus is to be paid in printing press money—more inflation. Plus three billions in Frazier-Lemke printing press money!

City folk began to get jittery.

GOOD PRICES

Temporarily, inflation is not so bad for a farmer.

His crops sell for higher and higher prices. And he doesn't have to spend much in actual cash. He has his shelter. If he is a good farmer he sets his own table. His wardrobe is not expensive. He has enough machinery to last him for awhile.

On the other hand, the urban worker's cost of living soars, and his income rises reluctantly.

Ultimately, with the decline in the urbanite's capacity to pay mounting farm prices, the farmer is certain to feel the effect of the shrinkage. In the meantime, however, he will have had much the better of the bargain—just as the urbanite had the better of it while agriculture was being deflated.

He may be getting his revenge.

But, "Revenge" (Juvenal) "is sweeter than life itself—so think fools."

TO REMAIN AN ISSUE

The Frazier-Lemke plan will be an important 1936 campaign issue, anyhow.

It is immaterial to the Frazier-Lemke-ites that it is inflationary. They favor it, not as inflationary, but as Frazier-Lemke-ism. The inflationists favor it, not as Frazier-Lemke-istic, but as inflationary.

MORGAN AND LEVITZKY

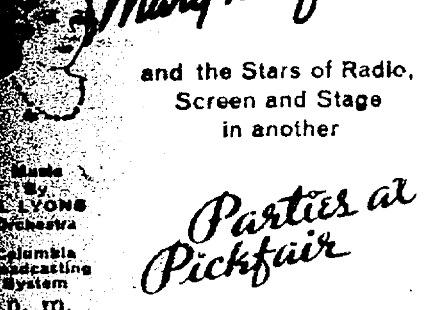

Bing Crosby will bring the lovable screen character actor, Frank Morgan, to the microphone for a human interest interview in the Music Hall on Thursday, May 21. Other guests in the broadcast over a WEAF-NBC network at 9 p. m. (EST) are the Avalon Boys, a vocal quartet; and Mischa Levitzky, concert pianist.

Bob Burns, radio's premier story teller, will be on hand with his tales from the Arkansas mountains and Jimmy Dorsey's band will play "swing" arrangements of tunes of the moment besides doing the accompaniments to Bing's songs.

Frank Morgan was an established actor on Broadway where he played in several successes before he went to Hollywood. In recent months he has been heard in radio drama but never before in one of the extremely informal interviews which Bing introduced to radio.

Mischa Levitzky is one of the foremost of the younger generation of concert pianists. Although he spends most of his time in the United States he has also had triumphs in all the concert centers of Europe. In the Music Hall he will play a group of piano numbers.

MANY VETERANS VIE IN BIG TEN TITLE CONTEST

Willis Ward, George Neal and Irvin Seeley Only 1935 Winners Not Back

COLUMBUS, May 19— The stern type of competition and the bitter fight that will take place for points at the annual Western Conference track and field championships May 22 and 23 at Ohio State university stadium is indicated by the fact that 41 of the 53 competitors who placed in events at Ann Arbor a year ago will be back this year.

The winners of 12 of the 14 individual events will be among the returning men. The victors who will return in an effort to repeat are Jesse Owens of Ohio State in the 100 and 220-yard dashes, low hurdles and broad jump; Carleton Crowell, Wisconsin, in the 440-yd dash; Charles Beetham, Ohio State, in the 880-yard run; Don Lash, Indiana in the mile and two mile runs; Jack Kellner, Wisconsin, in the high hurdles; Widner Etchells, Michigan, in the discuss; Mark Panther, Iowa, in the javelin; and Bob Riegel, Illinois, who tied for first place in the high jump.

The only winners in 1935 who will not be back are Willis Ward, Michigan, who tied with Riegel in the high jump; George Neal of Ohio State, winner of the shot put, and Irvin Seeley of Illinois, the pole vault winner.

On the basis of performances a year ago and those displayed in the indoor and preliminary meets this spring, the keenest of competition is likely to develop in all events.

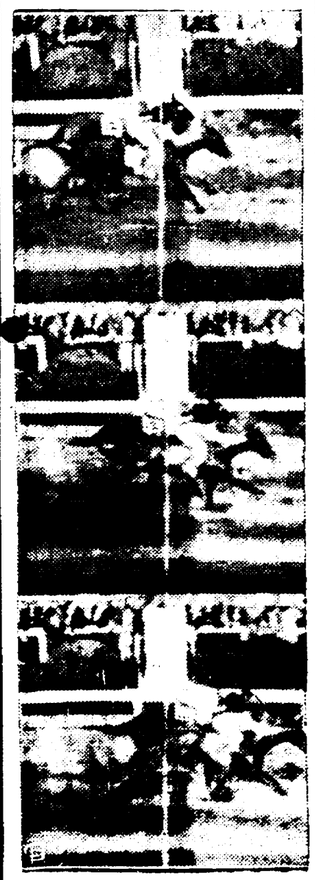

DETROIT GIVEN HOPE BY CROWDER'S WORK

NEW YORK, May 19—(UP)—Detroit's world champion Tigers, plagued by injuries and ineffective pitching, took new heart today from the return to condition of General Alvin Crowder, veteran 35-year-old hurler who gave one of the most dramatic performances in world-series history last fall.

Crowder's pitching arm went lame in spring training and it was not until yesterday that he felt equal to a starting role. He seemed to pick up right where he left off after that game in Chicago. He pitched a five-nitter against the Washington Senators yesterday and the Tigers won, 7 to 1. Detroit collected 11 hits in sending Pete Appleton down to defeat.

The New York Yankees, leaders of the American league, were rained out of their scheduled contest with the Cleveland Indians.

Bold Venture Won!

BOLD VENTURE won by a nose! But the finish in the Preakness was so close it took a Magic Eye camera to pick him officially as the winner over Granville in the 16th running of the Preakness at Pimlico, Baltimore, Md. In this series of Magic Eye camera shots of the finish, Bold Venture, the Kentucky Derby winner, is closest to you with Granville on the rail. By a nose? Yes, indeedy.

SAUNDERS HURLS NO-HIT NO-RUN BASEBALL TILT

They are singing the praises of Shadel Saunders, New Holland's fine athletic coach, in the west-county village today as a result of the tall mentor hurling a no-hit no-run baseball game Sunday.

The Helfrich's, for whom Shadel tosses them, defeated the Hocking Glass team of Lancaster, 2-0. Only one Lancaster athlete reached first base.

Saunders walked but one man and fanned 12.

Next week the Helfrichs will play the Kay Jewelers of Columbus on the New Holland field.

AURORA, Ill., May 19—(UP)—With Bold Venture definitely out of the $12,000 added Illinois derby Friday, 36 thoroughbreds began pointing today for the first major stake race of the rich Chicago district racing season.

BY UNITED PRESS

With fans screaming "home run or no count," the Minneapolis Millers tied an American association record for 15 runs in one inning yesterday and defeated the Kansas City Blues 24 to 10.

The victory edged Minneapolis up in second place as the league leading St. Paul team dropped a game to Milwaukee by a 11 to 3 score. Milwaukee replaced Kansas City in third place. The Blues dropped to fourth.

The Millers and Blues placed eight home runs in the record books in their slugfest. Minneapolis, in its own park, made six circuit drives with Buzz Arlett getting two in successive times at bat. Nine homers in one game is the record.

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

The first natural-color picture of the outdoors, Walter Wanger's production of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," playing for last times today at the Cliftona theatre, with Sylvia Sidney, Fred MacMurray and Henry Fonda in the starring roles.

"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," based on the famous novel of the same title by John Fox, Jr., was filmed on a location almost exactly like the Cumberland Mountain country in which the Fox novel was set. Under direction of Henry Hathaway, who also directed "The Lives of a Bengal Lancer," it was filmed entirely in the new three-color Technicolor process.

AT THE GRAND

Dick Powell, Warner Bros.' crooning star of "Colleen," now showing at the Grand theatre, is not content to rest on his laurels as a singer. He constantly is studying so that he may become truly an all-around musician.

Many knew that Powell had been a student of the trumpet, but it was not until "Colleen" was shot, requiring real cornet playing by the star, that it was known how far his education on the valve instrument had progressed.

Mt. Pleasant Brother ... staged its big fox drive.

One of the most successful fox drives ever staged in Pickaway co was sponsored by the Mt. Pleasant brotherhood on Jan 21, 1920. Proceeds from the drive amounted to approximately $500.

E. C. Rector, president of the organization, was master of the drive. The crowd was estimated at 2,000 persons. Lines were formed at Fox, Pherson, Yellowbud and Clarksburg and the roundup was held on the farm of Atty. Fred C. Rector.

Seventeen foxes, 56 hawks, one eagle and a vast number of crows were captured. A drizzling rain fell during the early morning and later turned to sleet and ice. The birds were unable to fly due to the coating of ice on their wings. The prices on foxes averaged $20 each.

LETTER WRITTEN TO CHIEF AIDE READ TO SOLONS

Townsend transcontinental caravan.

Prior to introduction of the correspondence, Townsend denied having called supporters of the pension scheme "old fossils" or starting the drive for motives of "cold cash."

Townsend, his correspondence revealed, urged that a national Townsend weekly be started in Washington "where it is possible to maintain supervision of both senators and congressmen and learn their characteristics and particular leanings."

He said he had no doubt that funds to finance the paper would be forthcoming from Townsend-ites. However, if their funds did not suffice, he knew "where the funds could be supplemented."

"I do not like the idea, however," Townsend wrote, "of entangling alliances. We have had enough of them."

After Townsend admitted his authorship, a series of letters he exchanged in 1935 with clements, resigned secretary-treasurer of the movement, was introduced.

Townsend spoke of going to Arizona to "help the people recall their two senators."

Study Candidates

Townsend wrote that the "only recourse we have" until a third party is formed is to support favorable candidates of the major parties and advised Townsendites to enter actively in congressional campaigns.

"I still feel a third party is our only salvation," Townsend told the committee.

HINDENBURG TO ARRIVE ABOUT 3 A. M. WEDNESDAY

ABOARD DIRIGIBLE HINDENBURG EN ROUTE TO NEW YORK, May 19.—(UP) — Capt. Ernst Lehmann, commanding the dirigible Hindenburg on her second flight to the United States, said today the ship should arrive at Lakehurst about 3 a. m. Wednesday.

At 7 a. m. ship's time we were making 40 knot's into a head wind. The ship has taken a more southerly course to avoid a storm blowing off the Main coast. The wind was blowing at 32 knots. The 6 a. m. EST position put the Hindenburg 828 miles east of New York in latitude 38.23 north, longitude 34.33 west.

25,000 IN CONSERVANCY ASK GOVERNMENT MONEY

NEW PHILADELPHIA, May 19.—(UP)—Petitions bearing 25,000 names of residents of the 18 counties in the Muskingum Watershed conservancy district, asking the federal government to assume the assessments levied against property benefitted by the district's $34,590,000 flood control program, will be presented to Ohio's two senators and a group of congressmen at a conference in Washington Friday.

Circulated by the Newcomerstown Defense League, the petitions will be presented by a delegation headed by Probate Judge J. H. Lamneck of New Philadelphia and the mayor of Zanesville.

The group will ask the senators and representatives to take the petitions to President Roosevelt and attempt to enlist his aid in the movement.

Amendment to Regulate Nation Industry Hinted

matter of time. Down with the Guffey bill went most of the hope of those who projected legislation to regulate other individual industries or who believed a federal 30-hour-work week program could be bomb-proofed against high court attack.

The New Deal money-raising program took another jolt in the Guffey decision. Mr. Roosevelt had budgeted for $18,900,000 from coal taxes during the current and next fiscal years. The sum involved is small compared with the wealth denied the treasury when agricultural adjustment was outlawed but it moves the budget out of balance a little more.

So far $674,883 has been collected in coal taxes. The treasury is studying the decision to determine whether this sum would be legally refunded to mine operators. Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., testified recently that New Deal expenditures, the cost of the bonus and failure to collect AAA processing taxes probably would boost the budget deficit to a new high.

Nine Losses to Two

Coincident with the Guffey bill reverse—which brought the New Deal Supreme court score to nine losses against two victories — the District of Columbia court of appeals outlawed one of Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell's rural resettlement projects at Bound Brook, N. J. The decision jeopardized similar projects involving land purchase. Lawyers said, however, that the 1935 $4,000,000,000 relief appropriation from which funds were drawn was not invalidated by the appeals court decision.

"The decision was limited to the particular type of project involved and, as the department of justice interprets it," said Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, "was not intended to apply to other agencies of the government or to other activities of the Resettlement administration."

New Deal critics rejoiced over the Guffey decision, recalling that Mr. Roosevelt wrote last year to the house committee which considered the Guffey bill in these words:

"I hope your committee will not permit doubts as to Constitutionality, however reasonable, to block the suggested legislation."

Alternatives of varying scope to the Guffey act as seen today included:

1. A campaign showdown and submission of a constitutional amendment if the popular vote approved New Deal policies.

2. A New Deal-labor effort to salvage individual-industry regulation by some new method of approach along lines of a bill being drafted by United Mine Workers' leaders.

3. Voluntary agreement among miners and operators on a solution of their problems to include collective bargaining and imposition of competitive standards.

4. Creation of an inter-state coal compact or uniform legislation by producing states to mesh with new federal legislation within constitutional limits.

5. Legislation to require national incorporation or licensing for corporations doing business among the states.

Bolstering belief Mr. Roosevelt might make constitutional amendment a campaign issue was the precedent of the Child Labor act decision. Reasoning in the child labor and Guffey cases was identical on some points. Congress conceded its inability to proscribe child labor by legislation but in 1924 submitted an enabling constitutional amendment to the states. It still is pending.

Consequences of the Guffey decision foreseen by some observers today included:

1. Possible labor trouble in the soft coal fields.

2. Revitalization of the presidential year constitutional issue.

3. A swing of labor further from the courts and strict constitutionalists toward the new deal.

4. Foreclosure against other "little NRA's" for the textile, steel, automobile and other individual industries.

5. New political emphasis upon Mr. Roosevelt's willingness to take a chance on constitutionality of desired legislation.

6. New campaign ammunition for the New Deal in big mine and industrial states.

7. Ultimate scrapping of the Wagner labor relations act and practical prohibition against further federal regulatory experiments relating to hours, wages and competitive conditions.

and Frank Johnston, principal, sciences and mathematics. This school is operated on the six-six basis.

R. F. Stebelton, superintendent, was reemployed by the board some time ago. Stebelton teaches history, social sciences and English.

The Jackson-twp board will meet June 1 to consider teachers for the next term.

Several changes were made in the Scioto-twp school official staff when the board of education and Supt. John G. Barton met Monday evening.

Raymond Hackney, principal and coach during the last year, was made eighth grade teacher, leaving the principalship open.

Miss Helen Williams, daughter of Dallas Williams, and Miss Evelyn Walker, daughter of Robert Walker, all Scioto-twp residents, were employed to teach the fifth and sixth grades, respectively. Kenneth Bobb, teacher in the Orient school, has been transferred to the Scioto seventh grade. Miss Helen Hill, daughter of J. B. Hill, Orient, was hired to teach the upper four grades at Orient.

Mr. Barton's contract as superintendent has another year to run.

Madison-twp grade school teachers were reemployed for the next term at the board meeting Monday evening.

The instructors are Theodore Snyder, superintendent, sixth, seventh and eighth grades; Miss Adelaide Hinkle, third, fourth and fifth grades, and Miss Glenna Costlow, first and second grades.

The board took no definite action on the employment of a music teacher. Mrs. Paul Teegardin was music instructor during the last term.

Board members will hold their next regular meeting June 15.

FOUR YOUNG OHIOANS MEET IN WASHINGTON

COLUMBUS, May 19.—(UP)—The selection of four Ohio youths to represent Ohio's 56,000 4-H club members at the National Club Encampment to be held at Washington D. C., June 18 to 24, was announced here today by W. H. Palmer, state club leader, Ohio State university.

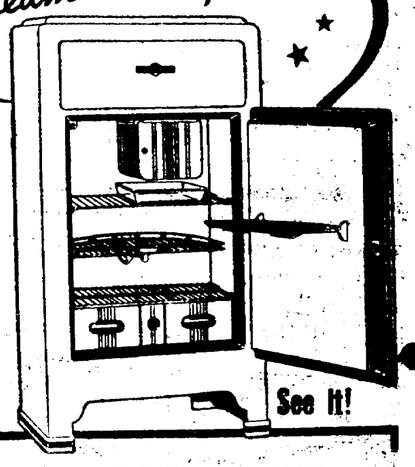

Those selected were: Louise McClain, Alexandria; Wava Kurte, Lima; F. Irvine Elliott, New Concord, and Dean Garber, Bellville.

Choice as delegates was based upon an excellent record in club work, the successful completion of all projects in which they enrolled, and a spirit of leadership in club work and community affairs. One of the four has been a club member or a club advisor for the past 11 years and each of the other three has been on the 4-H club rolls for seven years or longer.
